

Ivania Vega

Ivania began her architecture career as a drafter for high-end custom designed single-family homes in Nicaragua in the early 2000 s. In 2006 she obtained her Masters Degree in Construction Quality & Project Management at the Universidad Politécnica de Madrid in Spain, city where she also worked drafting architectural plans for both commercial and residential building projects. In 2007 she moved to Honduras to work for the Rollout of the Caribbean telecom giant Digicel as a Regional Construction Manager. Ivania held responsibilities as project manager for the construction of over 150 cellular base stations in the western region of that country. Ivania moved to Nicaragua where she founded her own architecture design and construction firm in 2009 called Vega Rueda Arquitectos, where she led the development of residential and commercial use projects in that country, including turnkey projects.

In early 2019 she complemented her architectural experience with interior design of fine custom cabinetry and interior spaces for Elite Cabinetry in Naples, Florida. By late 2019 she partnered with Galexa in the creation of G+ Studios as the head of the design department.